

Position Announcement Dean of the College of Communication, National Chengchi University

The National Chengchi University (NCCU) invites applications and nominations for the Dean of the College of Communication position.

The NCCU College of Communication comprises four undergraduate departments/programs—Department of Journalism, Department of Advertising, Department of Radio and Television, and Undeclared Major in College of Communication; five graduate programs—Master’s Program in Communication Studies, Master’s Program in Digital Content, EMA Program in Communication, International Master’s Program in International Communication Studies, and International Master Program in Inter-Asia Cultural Studies; as well as one doctoral program—Ph.D. Program in Communication.

The NCCU College of Communication is the longest-standing communications school in Taiwan and leads the nation in communication research and education. With many Outstanding Research Award recipients, the college constantly pushes communication research boundaries. For the past few decades, it has cultivated leaders and professionals in various communication industries, both in Taiwan and greater Asia. As a highly integrated institute, the college reviews and modifies its curriculum and educational policies regularly, which enables it to adjust to the ever-changing communication environment effectively.

More information about the College can be found at <https://comm.nccu.edu.tw/?locale=en>

Candidates for the position of Dean should be a full-professor with excellent capability in academic leadership, high integrity, demonstrated administrative experience, and a strong commitment to faculty development and research excellence to ensure the College's continued success.
